

I would make a timelapse of my walk from the newschool to cooper sq. Then I would start at cooper square right before the park (I would capture a visual of the square spinning). Then proceed to take the viewers on a walk towards the actual park itself. It faces the back of Coopers monument, I would then take them around the park till we got to the front of the monument. After, I would enter the park to then sit on a bench, and capture the monument as a whole.

My audio clip would consist of sounds from the parks, cars passing. Feelings one would feel while sitting in the park. And ideas of the people sitting in the park, as well as some poetry.

Not many people are there..its very quiet, very relaxing and people walking with backpacks to the desired locations. People walking in the cold as snow falls, walking with jackets, hats scarves and bags. Cars driving past, with nice architecture surrounding the park itself. Only one man was sitting in the park while it was snowing.
