50+ student organizations & clubs

1K+ public programs every year

2K students living in on-campus housing in Greenwich Village

“Find your community. Build lifelong friendships with students who share your interests, passions, and perspectives.”

“I’ve met some of my best friends through living on campus. It was a really great way to understand the community and integrate myself into it.”

Emma Wernsdorfer, BFA Integrated Design, Parsons School of Design

“The New School community has provided me many great opportunities, like free screenings, talks, and my job at The New Store.”

Amanda Zaldivar, BS Interdisciplinary Science, Eugene Lang College of Liberal Arts

“Our community extends beyond the four walls of our buildings. Studying in the heart of New York City’s Greenwich Village, our students are immersed in a place where intellectual curiosity and social activism creatively intersect with art, design, and performance. Learn what it’s like to live and study in one of the world’s most creative communities.”

COMMUNITY AT THE NEW SCHOOL

“Since the school has no real campus and is in the center of the city, it is hard for students to feel part of a community.”

“Great if you are simultaneously pursuing something else outside of school. If your main focus is on school, then you may feel a lack of community.”

“There are no party scene at The New School. You have to go out with your friends if you want to party.”

“The communication between the different departments can be stronger, as well as creating a sense of community.”

“The community can be cliquey. In some of my classes no one talked to each other.”

“I’d like there to be more communication between the administration and the students. The illustration major isn’t prioritized compared to fashion or communication design majors.”
