

Reflection:

The creatures that my partner chose came from Hamptons. The description of my creatures was positive and they lived a happy life with a little bit of relationship distance that was overcome by their lifestyle and interests. My partner's creatures were stereotypes of the natives of Hamptons and resembled the human features and characteristics and therefore it was easier for me to relate a story that could occur in real life. As the people from Hamptons are wealthy their behavior and attitude is different too, which was ideal for my essay. Their life style really interested me, which made my essay process faster. The most challenging part I faced was writing a story of a happy and a perfect couple and therefore I kept their characteristic the same and modified the story to something more realistic.

I started off with jotting down few points that I wanted to include in my story. Making a list of the points, I laid off a plot that could perfectly fit my points in. I started free writing and continued to wherever my thoughts and ideas took me considering the plot I had in mind.

The interview played a huge role in my writing. I figured out exactly what the characters meant and how their personalities related to one another. In a certain way it did complicate my ideas about the characters as I got to know few details, which were important about the characters that changed my plot to a certain extent. I changed the structure of the writing a little bit to suit the readers.

I happy with the final product as I did not only surprise myself by writing an essay on a theme that I could not relate to personally at all but also the structure that I finally narrowed down to was helpful for the readers.

“She's okay with it because she likes to shop and spend money and she can do that well without her husband.”

“He works in the city and makes a lot of money.”
