Smart Car | The NYPD plans to introduce more high-tech cruisers, like this prototype, into its fleet

Main console: contains a feed from the video cameras, a printer for summonses and reports, and a barcode scanner for drivers' licenses

Surveillance camera: can send live video of crime scenes to officials at NYPD headquarters

Radiation detector: fixed to the rear window, the detector checks the air for contaminants

Infrared monitors: attached to the trunk, they scan license plate numbers, which are run through a database to determine if a vehicle was reported stolen or if the driver has outstanding infractions

Power supply: the modem and other computer circuitry are located in the trunk
