PROJECT

Me and Sustainability

GOAL

Being a fashion design major student at Parsons, I always have so many bags to carry all of my materials and sewing supplies with me. I always try to find a bag that is strong and big enough to carry all of my materials but there are always something missing for example, if the bag is big enough the handle will be very thin so it would hurt my hands.

I wanted to design a bag that will satisfy all my needs and also that is very eco-friendly at the same time. The bag is made from all of the plastic packages that I have personally collected from everyday garbage. The lining of this bag is just left over muslin that I use in my fashion classes and it is fused to make it more stronger. I also made a pattern to be just one piece so it can prevent wasting any unnecessary fabrics.
