Union sq observation

- I sat down on a bench; a lot of people are around me. Immediately, I felt excitement. Things definitely have changed since the last time I visited: Although the trees haven't grow their leaves out yet, a lot of birds (by "a lot of" means thirty or more) are singing and flying; I see a squirrel with a nut in its mouth approaching me with cautious; I see a couple next to me sharing a bottle of sparkling water; I see people hanging out, eating and drinking coffee on the bench; I see women wearing floral print dresses; I see the sun shining signing that spring is finally here.
- Seasonal vibration: it is not cloudy today, the sunlight is bright and yellow, shining down from my east side. It is either cold or hot, the weather is perfect with a little wind.
- Atmosphere change: it is a little humid because it was raining yesterday. The air is clean. I can feel a little bit wind occasionally from where I am sitting. There are medium cloud covering the sky, they are moving very fast.
- Built environment: there are a lot of building around me, not too tall so I can see the sky. There is a small construction in front of best buy, maybe it is temporary since it is small. Grasses are inside of the fence in union square, there is a statue of a person riding a horse in the front and middle part of union square.
- Sounds: there are voices going on in union square, however, you can still get your peace here. The rolling skate wheels are creating the loudest sound here, sounds of people's conversation, car, and birds are under the rolling skate wheels' sound.
