

After completing this piece, several points came up to me upon reflection. I was able to appreciate and discover the details within simple clothing, from silhouette down to the details on how the fabric was weaved together. But on a more spiritual aspect, I realized that studying and interpreting this single garment gives you a more intimate connection towards your garments, it makes you think of how much it has impacted your life which extends to the thought on how the same garment would impact other lives differently. This is something that I have never thought of or came up to mind - that garments could have much more of a sentimental value to you than you think it does.
