

The inspiration of this new dress come from the first winter I spend in New York. Many of you guys may know, southern China usually don't snow in the winter. I was quite excited about the snow in New York. However, the snow in New York City are not close to what Im anticipated about, is not white, is more of a ash grey color. It wasn't as pretty as I imagined it would be, I think the dirt on the street made it look bad. The layer of this dress is like the snow in NYC. As you can see, the outside part is the darkest, because is covered full of dirt, and the middle part is white.